gings and robberies of escorts throughout the country. Local prosecutors also allege he raped a 13-year-old Southbridge girl during over the summer. He had fled the state after cutting off his GPS ankle bracelet, as that case was still ongoing.

New York police initially tried to stop the vehicle Lewis was driving because it was missing a license plate, but Lewis fled, ultimately crashing the blue Jeep Grand Cherokee into a river, only to emerge from the sinking vehicle to brandish a gun at a witness. Authorities responding to the crash found Lewis at the scene of the crash and arrested him.

tion of the gun he is accused of stealing from a family member in September. State authorities said Lewis had talked about returning to the state to kill the Southbridge victim.

The Jeep is believed to be the car he allegedly used during a spree of alleged rapes, kidnappings and robberies of female escorts in North Carolina, Colorado and Oregon, and an alleged armed robbery of an escort in Indianapolis.

He was arraigned Wednesday in Washington County, New York, as a fugitive from justice. A hearing will be held to determine when Lewis will be extradited to Massachusetts.

Timeline

According to police:

- Sept. 15: Police say Lewis cuts off his GPS monitor and leaves it in the front yard of his alleged victim, flees the state.
- Sept. 23: Lewis kidnaps, assaults and robs a female in North Carolina.
- Sept. 25: Lewis returns to his family home in Mass. where he beats, cuffs and robs a family member before once again fleeing the state.

Harvard students help 'carry the weight' of rape

Students at Harvard University took part in the Carry That Weight Day of Action on Wednesday, joining with Columbia University rape survivor Emma Sulkowicz in protest against sexual assault on school campuses. / NICOLAUS CZARNECKI, METRO

Students at Harvard University helped carry the proverbial weight of sexual violence Wednesday by hefting dormitory mattresses around campus in solidarity with a Columbia University rape survivor.

The Carry That Weight event was part of a nationwide Day of Action in which dozens of colleges across the U.S. held similar demonstrations in support of Emma Sulkowicz, a Columbia University art student who, since September, has been carrying her mattress around campus in protest of her alleged rapists' continued enrollment at the college.

Sulkowicz plans to continue carrying her mattress for as long as her accused attacker attends the same school, or until she graduates or is expelled.

Harvard undergraduate Helen Clark stood in Harvard Yard on Wednesday afternoon handing out colorful markers so passersby could write messages of support on the bed's blue sheet.

"So many people have responded positively to the project, and hopefully when people show that this is an issue that they care about, the administration and the powers that be will pay attention," said Clark.

Harvard undergrad Kara Lessin said she got involved with Wednesday's demonstrations because she was inspired by Sulkowicz's bravery.

"I think it's never enough — even if there is one sexual assault we haven't done our job as well as we could — but [Harvard] is getting there. We can always do better." Clark

"We're college students who are being wronged and who are not being protected by our institutions," said Lessin. "While it's tragic that it takes a woman literally carrying around her mattress, at least people are noticing and at least it changes the dialogue." MORGAN ROUSSEAU

Assault

Keytar Bear may have been attacked, again

Keytar Bear, the beloved busker in a bear suit who plays the keytar for money around the MBTA, may have been the subject of another assault.

On the "We Love Keytar Bear" Facebook page Tuesday night, a user appearing to be the Keytar Bear stated:

"I thought Boston had my back but unfortunately people were video taping with i phones instead. There was another attack by 2 guys and a girl this time this time they tried to stab me with a knife and they stole from me. ... Im hoping my Keytar still works because I used it to defend myself but my Bruins jersey is f—ed up and that pisses me off because it had everyones signature tomorrow another people#KTB"

Keytar Bear has been attacked before. He told Boston

Keytar Bear / BARRY THOMPSON

Magazine earlier this year someone threw a Snapple bottle at him, damaging his keytar. He also alleged that someone — possibly the same assailant — started to take a selfie with him before punching him in the nose through his mask.

Keytar Bear did not return a request for comment. METRO

Haunted spots

Para-Boston has studied The Wayside Inn in Sudbury for five years. The company's Website offers video of a dark shadow seemingly appearing out of nowhere.

Researchers also recorded the sound of a piano playing in the middle of the night, though the piano is in a glass display case.

Their equipment also captured the sound of a woman sobbing and witnessed hot water faucets turned on at full blast in the middle of the night.

The group also recorded the sound of tribal drums at Connors Farm in Danvers.

Boston. A paranormal investigator from Salem is dead serious about his trade.

With its history of bloody battles, eerie graveyards and creaky taverns, even some skeptics consider Boston to be a hotbed of supernatural activity, and paranormal investigator Michael Baker is no different.

"I can say very confidently from what I've found that paranormal phenomenon is real. There are some very strange things happening out there. I have recorded data and evidence. I've witnessed it," said Baker, who founded The New England Center for the Advancement of Paranormal Science, also known as Para-Boston.

The Salem resident crouched on the ground at King's Chapel Burial Ground with his Electromagnetic Spectrum Sensor, but said it's a fool's errand to try and capture any paranormal activity in the midst of a bustling city.

To catch any action, Baker said one must be patient and wait in silence, typically in the dead of night. Sometimes it takes weeks, while certain investigations are carried out over the course of several years. Most of his cases occur at private residences. He has checked out many homes in Dorchester, East Boston, Chelsea and Everett.

cases can be explained through hysteria or psychological issues or misconceptions," said Baker, who has a background in biomedical electronics. "Some people just want their house to be haunted, and other people want closure – to know whether they're crazy or not."

Baker, shown investigating King's Chapel Burying Ground in downtown Boston, says business always spikes in the fall. "When Halloween comes around people are more open to having their houses investigated," he said.

But it's the remaining 1 percent that feeds his passion for paranormal science. Baker said he has recorded eerie events such as a woman hysterically sobbing, tribal drums, a piano playing and what sounds like people speaking.

Bay State beefs up security

Massachusetts public safety agencies are beefing up security at public locations around the state, in response to recent violence both domestically and abroad, including the attack last week at Canada's capitol.

"Given recent events here and abroad, public safety agencies are increasing our vigilance in ways that will be both visible and invisible to the public," said Terrel Harris, spokesman for the Executive Office of Public Safety and Security.

Harris said there was no specific, credible threat to homeland security in the state.

For security reasons, Harris said, the state cannot detail precise steps to be taken, but he noted that the public may witness random screenings, increased patrols and a greater uniformed security presence at various locations, including Boston's Logan International Airport.

Winchester. Man admits to bludgeoning mother

The man accused of bludgeoning his mother to death with a rubber mallet inside a Winchester apartment complex confessed to the murder while being led into a police station earlier this week.

Matthew McAveney, 46, is alleged to have killed his mother, Barbara, and her two cats inside her Swanton Street home before fleeing the state. His mother's body was discovered by police during a well-being check on Oct. 14.

McAveney went on the lam, prompting local authorities to release photos and community bulletins about his mother's murder. He was arrested in North Carolina last week. Tuesday night, as he was being taken into Winchester police headquarters, he apologized to his mother, family and pets before telling reporters gathered, "I murdered my mother."

He was arraigned in Woburn on Wednesday on several charges pertaining to the homicide. DANNY McDONALD

Ebola mission*Quarantine-like monitoring approved for US troops

Defense Secretary Chuck Hagel on Wednesday approved a strict, 21-day quarantine-like monitoring period for all U.S. troops returning from the Ebola relief mission in West Africa, the Pentagon said.

Hagel, acting at the recommendation of top military commanders, signed a memo asking for an implementation plan for the monitoring regimen, Rear Admiral John Kirby, the Pentagon press secretary, said in a statement.

Hagel also called for a review of the decision in 45 days to evaluate "whether or not such monitoring should continue based on what we learn and observe from the initial waves of personnel" returning from the West Africa relief mission, Kirby said.

The Pentagon chief's action expanded to all U.S. troops returning from Ebola-affected countries a policy that was put into place earlier this week by General Ray Odierno, the Army chief of staff.

Nurse clashes with Maine over her Ebola quarantine

Legal challenge.

Lawyers for Hickox said Maine officials would have to get a court order to enforce a quarantine.

Saying she will not be bullied by politicians, a Maine nurse is giving the state an ultimatum: lift her Ebola quarantine by Thursday or she will disregard the restrictions and go to court.

The saga of nurse Kaci Hickox illustrates how states are struggling to protect against the virus without resorting to overzealous and useless precautions or violating civil rights.

Hickox, 33, tested negative for Ebola after returning from treating patients in West Africa. She previously blasted New Jersey Gov. Chris Christie after she was taken from Newark's airport and put in a quarantine tent before being driven to Maine to spend the rest of her 21-day quarantine at her home.

"I truly believe this policy is not scientifically nor constitutionally just, and so I am not going to sit around and be bullied around by politicians and be forced to stay in my home when I am not a risk to the American public," Hickox told NBC.

California announced on Wednesday that people returning from Ebola-affected countries who have had contact with infected patients will be quarantined for 21 days on a case-by-case basis.

At a White House event, President Barack Obama scolded politicians who have sought quarantines or strict travel bans for caving into fears.

Rocket explosion probed, space station resupplied

Scene. The area around the launch facility was cordoned off on Wednesday and a helicopter circled overhead.

Authorities on Wednesday started investigating what made an unmanned U.S. supply rocket explode in a fireball moments after lifting off from a launch pad in Virginia, destroying supplies and equipment bound for the International Space Station.

The 14-story Antares rocket, built and launched by Orbital Sciences Corp., blasted off from the NASA Wallops Flight Facility on Wallops Island at 6:22 p.m. on Tuesday but burst into flames moments later. It was the first disaster since the National Aeronautics and Space Administration turned to private operators to run cargo to the space station.

The explosion is unlikely to unravel the deal, sources familiar with the situation said. The transaction, which is expected to close this year, was touted by the companies as a $5 billion merger of equals when it was announced.

The rocket that exploded on Tuesday was carrying a Cygnus cargo ship with a 5,000-pound payload for the station, a $100 billion research laboratory owned and operated by 15 nations that orbits about 260 miles above Earth.

The loss of the supply vessel posed no immediate problem for the orbiting station's six crew: two from NASA, one from the European Space Agency and three Russians, officials said.

Russia's Roskosmos space agency said it was ready to help ferry extra U.S. cargo to the space station if NASA requested.

Comcast settles cable lawsuit

Comcast has reached a $50 million settlement in a decade-old lawsuit accusing it of overcharging cable television subscribers, 1 1/2 years after the Supreme Court threw out a larger version of the class-action case.

The preliminary settlement means many current subscribers will receive as much as $33.33 million in services via a $15 bill credit, free Internet upgrades or movies worth up to $43.90.

Internet load speeds. Verizon reasserts no plans for web 'fast lanes'

Verizon Communications on Wednesday reasserted that it was not planning to strike any Internet "fast lane" deals that would help some Websites load faster than others, in a letter to a top Senate Judiciary Committee lawmaker.

The committee's chairman, Sen. Patrick Leahy, last week wrote to top U.S. Internet service providers (ISPs) urging them to formally commit to no so-called "paid prioritization" deals in which content companies could pay ISPs to ensure smooth and fast delivery of their traffic.

Verizon on Wednesday wrote back, calling paid prioritization a "phantasm." REUTERS

Ballot initiatives

DC, Oregon and Alaska to vote on pot legalization

Voters in the capital and two West Coast states will decide in the Nov. 4 elections whether to legalize marijuana, pushing closer to the mainstream a notion that was once consigned to the political fringe.

Ballot initiatives in Oregon and Alaska would set up a network of regulated pot stores, similar to those already operating in Colorado and Washington state. A measure in the District of Columbia would allow possession but not retail sales.

Public opinion on marijuana has shifted sharply in the past several years, and polls indicate more Americans now support legalization than oppose it. Advocates say that, like gay marriage, legal pot is an idea that gains support once people see it in action.

Opponents say legalization will create an aggressive new industry that will profit by marketing an addictive product to teens. REUTERS

It turns out entertaining George Clooney and Amal Alamuddin can be bad for business. A recent soiree thrown by the newlyweds at the Danesfield House hotel in Buckinghamshire, England, left other guests feeling a bit overlooked. Clooney's fabulous, swanky affair apparently necessitated renting out half the hotel's rooms. One guest posted to TripAdvisor, "Booked afternoon tea two months in advance for very special occasion for family, never got to go as was canceled one week beforehand due to exclusive event taking over the hotel. ... Won't book with them again." Sounds like something out of "Downton Abbey," honestly. Hey, speaking of —

I don't want that to be what I'm known as," she tells People magazine. In fact, that's just the beginning of Holmes' batch of don'ts. "I don't have any fear now; I don't have a lot of rules for myself and I don't take myself that seriously." But what do you do, Katie? Aside from humor People magazine when they ask about the divorce you've made it clear you don't want to talk about? Although I can see that takes up a lot of your time.

Jen is 24 and Chris is 37. Plus, Jen complained to Chris that she felt like the third wheel in their relationship because of all the time he spent with his kids." Easy, Paltrow. And by that headline, we don't mean you, the reluctant "Downton Abbey" viewer, who only watches the show because your significant other is super into it. We mean it seriously that another character on "Downton Abbey" may be biting the dust! It won't be due to consumption or cholera or being too polite to mention you've been stabbed and are bleeding out. None of these things! But apparently Lord Grantham's dog, named Isis, may not be long for the fictional world, due to the pooch's unfortunate name. A rep for ITV says the dog sharing a name with the notorious terrorist group ISIS is an "unfortunate coincidence." Not to seem cruel, but would the dog dying really be that big of a deal? On the show, I mean! The first season took place in 1912, and the current fifth season — already airing in the U.K. and debuting in the U.S. in January — brings Lord Grantham and family up to 1924. And the dog was already fully grown and very well-trained when the show started, so I'm not saying, but I am saying.

Daniel Radcliffe nails Blackalicious

Daniel Radcliffe has successfully navigated the tricky transition from child star to successful adult actor. His next trick?: rapping. The "Horns" star used his time on "The Tonight Show" to prove to Jimmy Fallon that he's got mad flow, turning in a startling rendition of Blackalicious' "Alphabet Aerobics." Pure wizardry, I tell you.

Shailene Woodley gets a bit risque

Interview. The star likes the way "White Bird in a Blizzard" doesn't shy away from teen sexuality.

Shailene Woodley hugs you if you're interviewing her in person. "It just gives us more of a connection," the actress says. She doesn't seem untouchable, even though she starred in two of 2014's hits ("Divergent," "The Fault in Our Stars"). In fact, the film she's peddling is the opposite of her previous blockbusters. "White Bird in a Blizzard" is a small, color-coded, sex-positive blend of drama, comedy and mystery

Online life

Shailene on social media

"White Bird" takes place long before we were all glued to our phones. Woodley herself tries to limit her own social media life. "It feeds insecurity," she explains. "Instagram is all about a story. It's all about, 'Look how interesting I am, how neat my life is, and I want you to like it so I feel validated even though I don't know you.'"

But she doesn't hate all social media: "I think Twitter's actually really genius, because you can wake up in the morning and you have a feed of the things you're interested in," she confesses. "It's like a personalized newspaper. I think it's smart, but it's just abused."

from indie and New Queer Cinema bad boy Gregg Araki ("Mysterious Skin").

Woodley plays a teen in the 1980s whose faintly insane housefrau mother (Eva Green) vanishes without a trace. But her character isn't a stereotype. "One thing I love about Kat is she's not goth, she's not punk, she's not grunge," Woodley explains. "She's this eclectic, alternative mix of a bunch of different things."

Like most Araki films, "White Bird" is carefree regarding sex, which Woodley found refreshing. "Most adolescent films explore all the heartbreak and first love but never explore the sexuality factor, which is huge," she says. "That's the defining thing of adolescence, figuring out who you are sexually — being scared of it, being excited by it, being liberated from it and nervous about it and in competition with others. There are so many different elements that are involved that no one really explores in movies."

Justin Simien sparks debate

Interview. The director of the provocative "Dear White People" talks reactions good and bad.

Writer and director Justin Simien has been getting plenty of attention since his debut feature, "Dear White People," opened at Sundance in January and snapped up the Special Jury Award for

JUSTIN SIMIEN

Breakthrough Talent. The film takes a fun, satirical look at race relations on a contemporary Ivy League campus and has sparked a lot of conversations — and more than a few Spike Lee comparisons.

Can you sum up how the past nine months of your life have felt?

It's been weird, man. [Laughs] It's been nine years on this project in particular, and for it to come together and for people to be actually interested in talking to me and talking about the movie and reacting to it, it's kind of weird to take in. But it's cool and it's very gratifying, especially to see the conversations — at least the positive conversations — that the movie provokes in people that have actually seen it.

What have you thought about some of the more

Side by side

Justin and Spike

What do you think of the possibly reductive Spike Lee comparisons?

I mean, it is lazy, but I have to say it's also really flattering because Spike's my hero. And the movies they're referencing, "School Daze" and "Do the Right Thing," are iconic films for me as a filmmaker and as a black person who likes movies. I don't think people are comfortable saying, "Oh, this is the new Bergman" — which I'm not, by the way. But I think it naturally occurs to people that filmmakers of color go in one category, and gay filmmakers and women go here, and everybody else is just cinema in general. [Laughs] And they can be compared to all kinds of people. On a certain level, I totally get it and welcome it. But on another level, I'd love to see what people think of me after I have a couple of films under my belt. Like, what is a Justin Simien film? I only made one, so it's hard to say.

negative conversations that have cropped up?

Most of the negative stuff comes from people who haven't seen the movie — people who are just reacting to the title or what they think the movie might be about. But I think my favorite explanation from it is from this woman named Rachel J. Watkin, a professor who said that when people are confronted by the complaints or thoughts or feelings of one minority or the other, they have to sort of go through the five stages of grief. And some people tend to stay in anger and denial a little bit longer than we hope for them to, but at least they've begun the process. So I can only hope that's what it is that I'm seeing. Because when you're on the Internet, people can be kind of vicious.

Even if they know who you are, they can be kind of vicious.

Well, they know who I am. I have no idea who they are. Their icon is just, I don't know, Raven-Symone smoking a cigarette. There's no way to tell who these people are. [Laughs]

Get your Halloween face on

Whether you want to go glam, gothic or even ghoulish, we have the beauty look for you. METRO WORLD NEWS

Scary Skeleton

1 To achieve this look, do your usual base routine— foundation, concealer and powder. Using a creamy eyeliner, draw a line from your mouth to the middle of your cheeks. Start applying the liner on the inner lip and blend to create a shady effect. Then draw two lines on each side for the stitches.

2 Using a matte brown bronzer, create a hollow along the cheekbones and exaggerate the zombie effect using a black shade. You can use any black powder but use it on the top of the bronzer because it will be much easier to blend.

3 Start with your usual smoky eye and blend toward the eyebrow. Apply black powder along the bottom lash line, then blend to create dark circles. If you want it to look real, you need to use very little product and build and blend gradually. Don't put a lot on at one time, and apply some mascara on the bottom lash-line but not on the top.

4 Using your black powder, fill in your eyebrows. You can go a bit heavy on this — the darker the better. For the final touch, apply a fair powder and a matte beige eyeshadow on your forehead and bridge of your nose — the same way you'd use a highlighter for contouring to look paler.

Get the look

'Eye' Spook

1 Do your usual base layer by applying foundation, concealer, powder and bronzer. You can create a gradation of color, starting with a nude in the inner part of the eyelid, then a golden khaki in the middle and a dark glittery shade on the outer corner. As usual, the secret is in the blending, as you want to avoid any harsh line. Don't forget the mascara on the upper and bottom lashes.

2 Fill in your eyebrows with a pencil or a powder; always do your eyebrows because they frame the face and lend a more polished look.

3 Now, here's the Halloween-y touch of this look: The spider web is simply created with a black eyeliner pen. Draw four lines from the corner of the eye to the temples. Then draw some thin strokes to join the four lines. It's almost too easy.

4 Since the eyes are quite dark, use a natural shade, such as a Dior nude gloss, to give the lips some volume.

Vampire Glam

1 Use a foundation that's one to two shades lighter than your usual one.

2 Underline your eyebrows with a white pencil and blend using a nude eyeshadow as a base. Apply a red shade in the crease of your eye. You can use an orangey blush if you don't have a red shadow at home, and wet your brush for greater intensity. Put some black powder along the upper lash line with eyeliner and use it to create a smoky effect toward the red shade.

3 Apply the white pencil along the waterline and in the inner corner of the eye. It really gives this vampiresque effect as well as opens the eye. For the bottom part, apply some black shadow along the lashes and blend it. Then add some red shade around the outside edge of the black shadow.

4 Apply a dark berry bloodlike lipstick, and with a highlighting concealer (try YSL's Touche Éclat), draw along the lip line for a sharper and neater contour and under the eye to hide any dark circles.

The monster within

He gravitates toward scary costumes

"These people tend to express their fascination with horror. They like to watch scary movies."

PHOTOOBJECTS.NET

What does his Halloween costume mean?

Parties. Costumes can reveal as much as they conceal, says author.

Halloween is the one night of the year when it's perfectly acceptable to pretend you're someone you're not. But it turns out that our costumes reveal more about our personalities and dreams than we might realize.

Author Kelly Rossi has always loved Halloween. The author of the new book "Dating the Wrong Men" says the holiday became even more special to her three years ago when a friend dragged her to a costume party.

"This pirate walked through the door, and we both knew that there was something there," she says. It turns out they were right — Rossi (who was dressed as the Queen of Hearts that fateful evening) and her pirate got married this week.

"I think that Halloween is — for me, at least — more lucky than Valentine's Day," she says. "People are taking chances and being themselves."

For years, Rossi has informally studied the meanings behind certain costumes and why we gravitate toward them. "Your costume is an expression of yourself," she says. "No costume is wrong."

We asked her about the costumes we'll all probably see this weekend and what they might say about their wearers.

1 His costume is inspired by the news "Those people are on top of current events," Rossi says, "and they want everyone to know that."

2 He's his favorite superhero "They are living out that childhood fantasy of saving the world," she says, noting that she's read several studies on the phenomenon. At times, it's to compensate for feeling inadequate — but not always.

3 He's dressed as an animal "When you get into animals, it's more about specific traits of those animals," says Rossi. "Lions signal strength; owls are wise."

4 He's a cop or firefighter "They desire to be taken more seriously," says Rossi.

5 He chooses a skimpy costume "It's people who put a lot of time into their body and want people to notice that," she says.

Rossi has worn costumes in each of these categories. "Looking back at the times I dressed as a cop, I was running a business and I was working hard to be taken seriously," she says, recalling how her costumes often revealed the phase of life she was in.

"It's your one chance of the year where you can say, 'I want to do this,'" she explains.

Trick or treat

Beware of creeps

Rossi warns that Halloween can also be a time that reveals people's meaner sides. "Look out for people who are using their costume to do obnoxious things," she says. "Or they are using your costume to do obnoxious things." She gives the example of a man dressing as a vampire just to have the excuse to bite women's necks or guys who leer at party guests in low-cut dresses.

VIALE KEEPS THE RENDEZVOUS SPIRIT ALIVE IN CENTRAL SQUARE

When the news came earlier this year that Rendezvous, one of Central Square's underrated and yet beloved restaurant and bars, would be closing, it was a disappointment. But with the recent opening of Viale, it seems like any worrying was misplaced. So far, at least drinks-wise, it's picking up right where their predecessors left off.

To helm the bar program for their Mediterranean-inspired restaurant, first time owners Greg Reeves and Mark Young, both of the nearby Green Street, have tapped Patrick Gaggiano, previously of Fairstead Kitchen and Trina's.

"Basically, we're just trying to have something for everybody and make it approachable," Gaggiano says of the cocktail program. Among the dozen on the list, two will be classics — the Widow's Kiss (applejack brandy, yellow chartreuse, Benedictine, Angostura bitters) at the moment — one will be the "one trick pony," a fun play on, he says, a boring cocktail, and the rest will focus on each of the spirits you'd find in a bar well. "If a guest isn't familiar with something they can just say, 'Oh, I like gin, here's [a] gin drink.'"

While most of the cocktails are quite approachable, they certainly highlight the autumn ingredients you'd expect. "I want to focus on cool amaros, digestifs and modifiers," Gaggiano says. "There's cool stuff coming out every month from Europe, whose flavors and herbaceousness are fun to play with."

Soon they'll be rolling out their house-infused amaros, like one he's working on with Pimm's mulled with raisins, vanilla bean, cinnamon and apples. Another uses Santa Maria al Monte, with peach tea, orange zest and a touch of maple syrup. "People can get used to it a little bit without getting your mouth destroyed," says Gaggiano.

Some of the best recipes so far include the Owl Farm, made with tequila, lime, beet syrup, allspice and salt. Beet can be a tough flavor to play with, but they found a great workaround here. "Chef and I stumbled upon it haphazardly," he says. "I'm definitely not a cook, and I don't know how to cook a beet." The end result came from cooking beets with granulated sugar, mint and ginger root and letting it simmer to "bleed out all the cool, funky vegetal flavor."

Fans of the bar at Rendezvous will be pleased. "We're trying to uphold the cult following and that vibe and atmosphere that Scott Holiday had at the bar here."

Don't forget to try the glogg, a "Game of Thrones"-type wine.

Crazy sexy cool

SuicideGirls, the Internet's 13-year-strong bastion of nerdy sexy cool, is hitting the road again with this fall's Blackheart Burlesque, a tantalizing revue of pop culture channeled through the site's tattooed, punk esthetic. And if that's not reason enough to go, supporting the girls puts you on the right side of the current online culture war. We spoke with the group's founder, Missy Suicide, about crafting the show, keeping it fresh and dealing with trolls.

You re-launched your live show last year. What's new about this year's tour?

There are a lot of new numbers. Last year's tour had a lot of pop culture references, but there were some non-themed numbers peppered through, but this year we've got so many new numbers and it's all themed out. There's an "Adventure Time" number this year, for instance, that I'm super-stoked about, and it's set to a Black Keys song. It's highly choreographed and super-sexy.

How exactly do you incorporate "Adventure Time" into a burlesque routine?

The girls are themed out, their costumes are "Adventure Time" and they're in character as different ent "Adventure Time" characters. It's so fun to see these characters that you know and love come to life dancing to these modern songs and doing it in a sexy, fun way.

SuicideGirls Take their show on the road and take it off. / SUICIDEGIRLS

You're going so many different places with this tour. Do you have a sense of how the crowds vary in each city?

I feel like there are superfans in every city. That's the thing that doing a website has taught me over the past 13 years is that there are small pockets of people that are into the same things you are, the same subcultures you are, in every city and every town all across the world. Before it was you just didn't know. But there are people around the world who all share the same interests.

And with the Internet you can find your kindred spirits a lot easier.

Exactly. You can find your penguin or whatever. [Laughs]

Is that a "Fight Club" reference?

Maybe. I tend to make a lot of Chuck Palahniuk references. You work so much online. You must have a unique perspective on the recent blow-ups about feminism and women's issues online. It's gotten really weird out there. Social media has always had inherent trolls. It's been this kind of Wild West thing where people feel like they can say just whatever comes to their mind. Just saying the worst things ever. Meanwhile, in our society, we have so many choices available to us these days, and so now women are gravitating toward things that had been predominantly male-focused, like comic books and video games and stuff. So many of the girls on the site are into geekier pursuits. And it's that, which is great, coupled with the troll culture, which has clashed in this way that's really alarming and upsetting. But I think eventually no society really tolerates any sort of Tourette-sian outburst, so I feel like at some point the Internet is going to have some sort of check and balance and people will behave accordingly. [Laughs]

God, I hope so.

I hope so, too. It's kind of shocking how long it's taking to get to that place. But hopefully. Sorry for that tangent! Hopefully people will come to the burlesque show!

 Here's Todd Browning's 1931 thriller, based on contemporary plays and not directly on Bram Stoker's original novel "Dracula." It cemented the modern vampire myth by transforming Count Dracula from an inaccessible aristocratic creep to a sexy, suave playboy so charismatic he almost seems an antihero. And most of today's vampires are, in fact, antiheroes, not true villains — something which would probably freak Stoker out.

 This set of three plays imagines the Hindu trinity of Brahma, Vishnu and Shiva as characters in contemporary life. ## Horoscope

♏ Scorpio | Oct. 23-Nov. 21.
Don't judge others. You will receive valuable information from an unlikely source. A person who is often disagreeable will have answers.

♐ Sagittarius | Nov. 22-Dec. 21. Don't offer to help a stranger with a good sob story. Allowing someone to take advantage of you will lead to regret and loss.

♑ Capricorn | Dec. 22-Jan. 20. Your steady approach will be difficult to maintain. If you make a snap decision, let your family know to avoid putting any of them in an awkward position.

♒ Aquarius | Jan. 21-Feb. 18. Be cautious when sharing personal secrets. Private information has a way of becoming public knowledge if you confide in the wrong person. Be smart.

♓ Pisces | Feb. 19-March 20. Get involved with events or organizations that are close to your heart. The more you believe in something, the more enthusiasm and energy you will offer. Expect to meet people who share your ideals.

♈ Aries | March 21-April 20. Think before you speak. If you are feeling overly sensitive, you may take something the wrong way. Listen carefully and refrain from making a lofty response.

♉ Taurus | April 21-May 21. Surround yourself with people who are encouraging and positive, and strive to be the same. The value of close relationships cannot be denied.

♊ Gemini | May 22-June 20. Touch up your surroundings. Renovations will add value to your property, or at the very least make you feel good. You can save money by doing the work yourself.

♋ Cancer | June 21-July 22. This is not the best time to get into a deep conversation. Plan some solitary activity where you can collect your thoughts before you speak your mind.

♌ Leo | July 23-Aug. 22. It's worth your while to go the extra mile at work. Dependable, hardworking people are not always easy to find, and your efforts will be noticed and rewarded.

♍ Virgo | Aug. 23-Sept. 22. An outgoing and colorful someone will take you by surprise. Don't be too quick to think this person has all the answers. If something sounds too good to be true, it's probably false.

♎ Libra | Sept. 23-Oct. 22. Little problems can grow out of proportion quickly. Electrical, plumbing or equipment concerns should not be taken lightly. If you are in doubt, check it out. EUGENIA LAST

Nurse's happiness doesn't trump national health

If Kaci Hickox feels her human rights were violated, then she is evidently ignorant and needs to read the Constitution. The good nurse's right to the pursuit of happiness does not apply to threatening the health and safety of others, even if unintentionally or inadvertently, as her fellow citizens in Maine are letting her know. Her exceedingly arrogant, partisan and opportunistic whining, with the support of NYC mayor Bill De Blasio, Sen. Chuck Schumer, Jon Stewart, etc., was getting tiresome. Ebola fears are new to the U.S. and we need to learn as we go. Irresponsible medical personnel are not helping.

Make thumb mark of civic duty

Maybe we really do not need a voter ID. If it has become so difficult in the USA for its citizens to obtain a photo ID, let's start using the indelible ink, as it is being done in some other countries (in Iraq, for example, where all voters have their thumbs marked with ink, which is impossible to remove for at least two days). But all voters will have to follow this procedure (not only voters without IDs) because otherwise dishonest people can vote twice — one time using their IDs and the second time pretending that they do not have an ID.

Un-PC?

I was about to refer to the period of unusually warm weather we are presently having as "Indian summer" when I realized this term might not be politically correct and someone might be offended. Do Metro readers think this term is OK or should we just call it a "sudden autumn warm period"?

Belichick fawns over Manning

Bill Belichick often speaks of lowly opponents with glowing praise. When he faces players and teams that are actually deserving of praise, Belichick cranks the flattering words up a notch. The Pats coach called Broncos quarterback Peyton Manning the "best quarterback I've coached against" on Wednesday. "Not to take anything away from the Montanas, Marinos and Elways or whoever is up there with those guys, but [Manning] is tough," Belichick said, four days ahead of the Patriots-Broncos matchup in Foxboro. "I don't think there are any weaknesses in his game."

Visit Metro.us to see the Bruins' full 2014-15 season schedule.

BE SURE TO DEAL WISELY AT FANTASY DEADLINE

The trade deadline in the NFL has come and gone. Next up? The fantasy deadline. When contemplating deals at this time of year, our No. 1 priority should be getting difference-makers into our starting lineup. We've grinded all year to build up enough depth so that we can afford to give up two good players in exchange for one great one. Our second priority should be setting ourselves up with plus matchups in the fantasy playoffs.

Newton's apple

Thanks to early season injuries and some tough matchups, Cam Newton's raw stats are not overly impressive. But make no mistake, he's playing at an extremely high level right now — utilizing both his arm and legs. In Weeks 14-16, Newton and the Panthers will face a dream trio of Swiss Cheese defenses: Saints, Bucs, Browns. His go-to guy will be rookie sensation wideout Kelvin Benjamin, who just went toe-to-toe with Richard Sherman and won.

Buffalo wild things

If you want to know just how

Sammy Watkins is enjoying a tremendous rookie season with the Bills. / GETTY IMAGES

bad E.J. Manuel was, watch Kyle Orton move this Bills offense. He's turning Sammy Watkins into a star and that will open up the field for Fred Jackson, once F-Jax returns from his knee injury. It's worth targeting all three of these guys for a potential shootout with Green Bay in Week 15 and a cupcake against Oakland in Week 16. Deep leaguers should also keep stashing Bryce Brown if possible.

Hunting our prey

Yeah, you've heard it before. But now it's really all coming together for Titans receiver Justin Hunter. He's played on 94.3 percent of the snaps over the last four weeks, Zach Mettenberger's big-armed/vertical style is a perfect fit and Nate Washington injured his shoulder in Week 8. With the Titans quickly spiraling toward irrelevance, they'll focus on their young pups even more — Hunter, Mettenberger, Bishop Sankey. Most importantly, they'll face two of the league's worst pass defenses in Weeks 15 and 16: the Jets and Jaguars.

NFL matchups

Fire up these borderline receivers in Week 9:

- Torrey Smith at Pittsburgh — Without Ike Taylor, the wheels have come off this Steelers cornerback unit.
- Odell Beckham vs. Indianapolis — The likely absence of Vontae Davis will allow both Beckham and Rueben Randle to roam free.
- Andrew Hawkins vs. Tampa Bay — Baby Hawk's role spikes when Jordan Cameron is out. He's also facing a secondary that loves to give up crooked numbers.

Pickups of the week

The best adds for Week 9:

- Charles Smith, RB, Bucs: The Bucs are rightfully down on Doug Martin. Sims is their guy.
- Donte Moncrief, WR, Colts: The size and speed freak is passing Hakeem Nicks.

NFL power rankings | by Matt Burke

No. 1

Broncos
(6-1)

The Broncos head to Foxboro with the same swagger they owned 11 months ago. Denver had just one loss heading into last November's game in New England, but left with two.

No. 2

Cardinals
(6-1)

The Cardinals already had the sparkling record heading into last Sunday's huge matchup with the then-5-1 Eagles. Now Arizona has that clutch, last-minute, signature win against a top team to boast about.

No. 3

Eagles
(5-2)

Jeremy Maclin caught only two passes for 16 yards in the Eagles' win over the Giants in Week 6. Maclin caught 12 balls for 187 yards and two touchdowns in the Eagles loss to Arizona. You figure it out.

No. 4

Patriots
(6-2)

In our Oct. 1 rankings, the Pats couldn't crack the top 20. Look at 'em now. Gronk is 100 percent and is scarier than ever. In the open field, he looks like Brock Lesnar playing against a secondary of Rey Mysterios.

No. 5

Seahawks
(4-3)

Had the Seahawks not won it all last season, they would likely be in the 14-17 range. Call 'em the Phil Simms' of these rankings — living off of past accomplishments and routinely stumbling on national TV.

No. 6

Chargers
(5-3)

That home loss to the Chiefs in Week 7 hurt badly. There was little chance that the Chargers were going to go into Denver on a short week to upend the Broncos. The good news is that their schedule now softens.

No. 7

Packers
(5-3)

We've been far too kind to the Packers this year and this week's No. 6 ranking keeps that trend alive. In our defense, all the teams in the 7-15 range don't deserve a ranking this high either. Someone step up!

No. 8

Colts
(5-3)

What exactly happened to the Indy defense in Pittsburgh? Ben Roethlisberger had the game of his life, throwing for 522 yards and six touchdowns. Still, the Colts should right the ship against the Giants.

No. 9

49ers
(4-3)

The 49ers were on their bye last weekend and because no team in this "barely-above-.500" range stepped up, they get the benefit of the doubt. They have the Rams, Saints and Giants coming up.

B's battle injury, inconsistent play

NHL. Torey Krug is the latest Bruins player to land on the shelf.

The Bruins (5-6-0) will wrap up a mediocre opening month to their 2014-15 season Thursday in Buffalo (7 p.m., NESN), and in order to enter November with a .500 record they'll have to find victory without the services of some of their top talent.

Zdeno Chara has been out of action a week now but the defense took another blow in Tuesday's 4-3 loss to the Wild when Torey Krug broke one of his fingers. Krug will be out two-to-three weeks.

Making matters worse, forward Brad Marchand left Wednesday's practice with an undisclosed injury.

"I don't know," Bruins head coach Claude Julien told ESPNBoston.com. "Obviously, he tweaked something and I'm not going to say more than that because we hope Torey Krug will be sidelined for two to three weeks with a broken finger.

GETTY IMAGES

he'll be in our lineup [against Buffalo on Thursday]."

Wednesday's practice was interesting in that Julien shifted around his lines a tad. Chris Kelly and Simon Gagne joined Patrice Bergeron on one line with Marchand, Carl Soderberg and Loui Eriksson on another. The only line that was steady was the top line of Milan Lucic, David Krejci and Seth Griffith.

Krejci and Lucic lead the Bruins in points so far this season with nine and eight, respectively. Griffith has been tremendous in the past 10 days, pumping in five points in his last four games.
